The University educates more than 70,000 students conferring more than 16,500 bachelor’s or higher degrees annually, which is 53% of the Missouri four-year public institutions and represents the majority of high-earning degrees in the state most notably in the areas of health professions, business and engineering. Approximately $90 million of annual appropriation provides funding for educating future doctors, dentists, pharmacists, optometrists, lawyers, and veterinarians.
